

Robert A. Pascasio, FACHE

Chief Executive Officer

Robert A. (Bob) Pascasio is a familiar face to the area after having served as CEO from 2001 to 2012, accomplishing many great things during his tenure, including the receipt of multiple grants that grew the organization.

Pascasio holds a Master of Science degree in Healthcare Administration from Southwest Texas State University, where he graduated with honors. He is currently a Fellow of the American College of Healthcare Executives, has been recognized for various achievements, has written papers and presentations on the importance and necessity of rural healthcare organizations such as CCPHD #1, and has remained actively engaged in community groups and organizations over his career.

Pascasio is a highly accomplished results-driven servant leader with almost 30 years experience across all segments of community healthcare delivery operations. He is recognized for managing complex environments, effective communications, structuring collaborations, building physician relationships, and developing high-performing teams.

“I’m very much looking forward to coming home to CCPHD#1 and working with the outstanding staff of the organization. I have every confidence that together, with the Board’s guidance, we can accomplish many great things and ensure the availability of quality healthcare programs and services in our community for many years to come,” shared Pascasio.

Bob is happily married to Vicki, also a healthcare executive, and they have called Anahuac home for going on 20 years. They have a daughter; Andrea, who lives in and loves Austin.
